Dear Friends,

Today is the day after for all the USA residents. The day after income taxes. Phew.

Today is the perfect day to talk about compensation in the article below. Just know that the most rewarding compensation is not taxable. How about more non-taxable compensation?

Compensation is what you get for your hard work. But, the work comes first, many times years of hard work. Be lazy, and give it less than your BEST and you will get less than the BEST compensation. Of course, many will blame others rather than themselves.

We have divided the books into categories in spite of the fact they overlap. The list is updated so it is time to take another look. Take that step now.

Cameron's Comments

Yes, I pay compensation to those who help me. I give smiles, hugs, and attention. We all like this compensation.

Of course, I still like the cash compensation so I can get that swing set. I tell grandpa that is the balance of things that we all need. He laughs.

I guess I'll have to help sand the boat to earn some of that cash compensation. Here I am returning the iPhone as I head out with hat and sweater to work on the boat.

Sign up for the Jump Start below. Grandpa will be too busy to work on the boat, I'll have to do it and that will Jump Start my bank account. He already coaches me. Don't tell him how much I enjoy it. You will too.

Compensation

Yes, compensation can be money.

Compensation is far more than money. We need money to live, but one can not live happily alone just on the compensation of money.

In life, our compensation is in balance and in proportion to our services, and what we do and give. To get we have to give. To give freely is to get freely. The balance of life works; however, the balance is over time and not balanced daily nor is it person by person.

The law of compensation makes sure we get what we earn and we earn what we get. There is always a cost involved.

Look at the wealthy man who works all the time. Sure, he has money and stuff. But, that wealth often costs a man his relationships, his family, and his health. One must be careful in chasing the compensation of money and the related costs potentially involved.

Compensation is the result of effort. One might just see the money and not be aware of the efforts that had first gone in. Know and understand there is a cost of the compensation received.

Compensation is far more than money and comes in many shapes, sizes, and forms. What greater compensation can a dying person have than to have his family fly in from all over to be with him on his last days? Is that not a wonderful compensation and worth far more money than money itself? You can be sure, in this situation, the man had given of himself freely and joyously to his family over time.

Often the compensation comes in strange ways. Consider the salesman who loses a sale he worked so long and hard on as the buyer had a relative in the business? Then consider how, in the not too distant future, a great sale comes easily and quickly. That is the balance, that is the law of compensation. The compensation comes, but not always from where expected. Just know it will come.

Compensation comes in friendships, favors, and positive referrals. You cannot help but to help another and be helped yourself. It is automatic. All you need do is extend yourself to another in need and help. You will be compensated.

In life, if you do not like your employer, do not feel you are paid enough, and do not make a full effort on the job because of it, you are only hurting yourself. In this situation, give more value than what you are getting so that you can move on to another job. But, know that in doing your best, you might just change the attitude of your existing boss towards you, you might end up liking him, and he may well start to pay you what you are worth.

Effort, learning, and giving always precede the compensation. Compensation comes after and not before. Know you have to first do the work, make the effort, learn the skills, and practice. It is that simple.

When you cheat someone in the effort given or the amount of work produced know that you are only cheating yourself. You are the one who will suffer the most for it. You will reap the compensation you earned.

Compensation is fair and does not discriminate. You are free to come and go, free to change jobs, free to better yourself, educate yourself, and move on. Sure, it may not be easy, it make take time, but it can be done.

Decide on the compensation you want, pay the cost and it will be yours. However, keep a balance, and do not give up love and relationships with family and friends for money. The compensation of love and friendship is far more compensation than money.
